

Amsterdam - New York Waterfront

Some of New York and Amsterdam's most extensive waterfronts are currently being planned for redevelopment. Finding a balance between modernizing the economic base, supporting new residential and commercial uses, creating access to the waterfront and improving public transportation requires a public and private commitment to innovation and visionary planning.

NADC and Regional Plan Association (RPA) established the New Amsterdam Waterfront Exchange in 2002 to encourage and support both cities in creating these visions and models. Public officials, developers and other redevelopment experts from New York and Amsterdam participated in workshops to understand possibilities for future redevelopment.

Amsterdam Eastern Docklands

Amsterdam's waterfront has experienced a dazzling transformation. An ambitious redevelopment plan enabled the waterfront to reemerge as an internationally acclaimed model for urban waterfront planning, development and culture. Through the prodigious efforts of both public and private parties, thousands of premium and affordable housing units have been built, along with new opportunities for manufacturing, offices, retail, culture and entertainment. These efforts are producing a thriving urban environment.

NADC's involvement includes a number of projects and processes, including managing public-private partnerships (New Deal Borneo Sporenburg), monitoring the participation of community groups in the development process, and project management for the Masterplan KNSM-eiland, draft development plans for temporary uses of existing buildings (Oostelijke Handelskade), and loft development (LxBxH Steigereiland).
